Disentangling her feelings for her father‚s home at Macduff, Angela Carter wrote, ‚The Japanese have a phrase ‚the landscapes of the heart, to describe the romantic correlation between inside and outside that converts physical geography into part of the apparatus of the sensibility‚. It is this subjective reading of landscape and the personal significance that elements within it can carry that have generated this body of work.

"It is still so new and all we see is empty space, but that is not how it is in the landscape of the heart. There, there is no empty space and he still laughs and grapples with ideas and plans and nods wisely with each of us in turn. We are proud to have known him. We are proud to have called him friend."
