Testing a Starfire in 1969, the late great Bob Currie concluded that it was 'really two machines in one'.
He wrote that whether it was an 'amiable, economical, ride to work 250, or a light and handy but distinctly peppy sports mount, depended upon the itchiness of your throttle hand'.

(The "W" in the model designation stood for "woodsman") The machine was essentially a Starfire with a fibreglass Triumph tank and side panels, high bars and a high level exhaust on the right hand side. The TR25W was built at BSA's Small Heath factory. A steel tank was introduced in 1969 and the machine also received the 7" t/s brake.
