Animal Dreams by Barbara Kingsolver. As far back as she can remember, Codi Noline had felt an outsider in her hometown of Grace, Arizona. Her dispassionate father - 'an obelisk of disapproval' - had always kept Codi and her sister Hallie apart from most of the townspeople. But now Hallie is abroad and Codi, troubled and lost, is returning after a fifteen-year absence to confront her past and face her ailing father.

You could call Barbara Kingsolver's Animal Dreams a meditation on the relationship between memory and identity, but that would leave out all the sexy parts. Not to mention the peacocks, the politics, the mercenaries, and the trash-talking grandmas of the Stich and B* club. Yup, you read that right.
