Nation

Of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues; out of every nation and [all] tribes and peoples and tongues. The classification, as in Revelation 5:9, is fourfold, symbolical of completeness in matters of creation (see on Revelation 5:9; 4:6, etc.). Stood before the throne, and before the Lamb; standing before, etc.

Accordingly, the consummation of the missionary mandate to make disciples of all nations (Matthew 28:19) is described in Revelation 5:9 as persons from "every tribe and language and people and nation" worshiping the Lamb and declaring the infinite worth of his glory. So the apostolic vocation (Romans 1:5) and the messianic example of Christ (Romans 15:9) and the consummation of all missions (Revelation 5:9) have one explicit aim: to display the glory of Christ through the ingathering of ...

Hays' From Every People and Nation is a great introductory text on race and ethnicity in the Bible. His exposition on the Genesis chapters are great, useful, and relevant for today. However in reading through it, I realized that Hays' focus is a quite limited in that he seems to be working from a primarily an American point of view, more specifically regarding racial tensions between Blacks and Whites.

Race is a central biblical theme, and yet has been neglected in much evangelical scholarship.
Daniel Hays offers a thorough foundational study, ranging from Genesis to Revelation, which includes careful examination of references to Cushites (black Africans).
