A Regiment for the Sea, which forms the core of the volume, is perhaps the earliest technical manual written by an Englishman. It is not simply his rules for navigation, for Bourne wrote much as he spoke, so that out of this instruction book for sailors a clear picture of the man himself emerges: serious, reliable, patriotic and with this inborn impulse to pass on his knowledge to others.

His simple manual, A Regiment for the Sea, was re-edited or reprinted at least ten times, I and was even translated into Dutch, although the Dutch were reckoned in the sixteenth century to be our masters in navigation techniques. His Regiment or Rule for the Sea contained the substance of the earlier Rules, some of them repeated verbatim, but in style and format, as well as in its enlarged content it is decidedly an improvement on its predecessor.

William Bourne was an English mathematician, innkeeper and former Royal Navy gunner who presented the first design for a navigable submarine and wrote important navigational manuals. He is often called William Bourne of Gravesend. In 1574, he produced a popular version of the Martín Cortés de Albarca's Arte de Navegar, entitled A Regiment for the Sea. Bourne was critical of some aspects of the original and produced a manual of more practical use to the seaman. He described how to make ...
