Certainly, one of my favorite features of Surpac is the ability to script and automate tasks using TCL.

Using the record macro function allows for an easy way to loop and repeat a series of existing functions within Surpac, and can unlock a lot of potential for creative Surpac users.

The triangle centroid macro creates an output string file containing a centroid of each triangle with stored dip and dip direction. This is useful in both a statistical sense (average dip and dip direction of a surface) as well as for use in interpolation when applied to a block model. Download create triangle centroids
