1- Homo Sapiens emerged in Black Africa 300,000 years ago from Homo Ergaster that had evolved there, from Homo Erectus that had migrated to the whole of Asia and Europe after migrating to Northern Africa. Homo Erectus evolved to Homo Heidelbergensis in Europe and then this first descendant evolved into Homo Neanderthalensis.

It is the style of civilization rather than its substance. And to the extent that even the style is maintained, there is a White minority present to keep the wheels turning. In those African countries which forced nearly all Whites to leave, civilization has ground rapidly to a halt and the jungle vines have begun taking over again.

Prison Writings: The Roots of Civilisation. This is certainly an ambitious title but then one could say that Abdullah Ocalan is a man with time on his hands. One would have hoped that he had used it more profitably especially, as he says, this is a part of his submission to ECHR and the initial observation is that he should get himself a good lawyer.

The roots of civilization and the domestication of humans is really a story of control, wealth and power. Billionaire Nomads Scholars once thought hunters and gatherers lived as scavengers, on the edge of starvation - as most modern men would if they had to survive on their own - and that the "invention" of farming created a surplus of food which allowed our ancestors to choose priests and rulers to lead them.

As Greece suffered a Dark Age between about 1200 and 750 BC and Bernal refers to roots of Classical Civilization, he had to explain the transmission of any early Afroasiatic influences across those centuries. He does so by, for example, backdating the invention of the Greek alphabet to many centuries before there was any evidence of it.

Black Athena: The Afroasiatic Roots of Classical ...
Black Athena: The Afroasiatic Roots of Classical Civilization, its three volumes first published in 1987, 1991, and 2006 respectively, is a book by Martin Bernal. He discusses ancient Greece in a new light. Bernal's thesis discusses the perception of ancient Greece in relation to Greece's African and Asiatic neighbors, especially the ancient Egyptians and Phoenicians who, he believes, colonized ancient Greece. Bernal proposes that a change in the Western perception of Greece took place from the

The Clash of Civilizations is a thesis that people's cultural and religious identities will be the primary source of conflict in the post-Cold War world. The American political scientist Samuel P. Huntington argued that future wars would be fought not between countries, but between cultures. It was proposed in a 1992 lecture at the American Enterprise Institute, which was then developed in a 1993 Foreign Affairs article titled "The Clash of Civilizations?", in response to his former student Fran

To understand the roots of the ongoing destruction, however, we must move beyond the myths of the West and of modernity. It is true that Western expansion has brought enormous wealth to a part of the world's population. But this story has been at the same time, and from its beginning, that of a series of genocides.
