A shoulder sleeve insignia (often abbreviated SSI ), is an embroidered patch worn on some uniforms of the United States Army. It is used by major formations of the U.S. Army; each formation has a unique formation patch. The U.S. Army is unique among the U.S. Armed Forces in that all soldiers are required to wear the patch of their headquarters as part of their military uniforms .

U.S. Army shoulder patches have had a short but colorful history of serving as insignia for military units. In 1918 a U.S. Army unit the 81st Division wore the first shoulder sleeve patch into battle. Soon after, other units going to battle in World War I were also wearing insignias and patches as unit identifiers.

Army Patch for Combat Operations
The Army combat patch, officially known as the "shoulder sleeve insignia-former wartime service" (SSI-FWTS), recognizes soldiers' participation in combat operations.
The Army has specific guidelines on when and how to wear the patch, which it has revised to reflect the fact that soldiers now are deployed at smaller echelon levels.
